Legislative Action Alert

Dear Supporters of Sarcoma Research,

Congress is in the process of funding the government for the remainder of the 2011 fiscal year. Unfortunately, a proposal in the House of Representatives contains significant and drastic cuts in funding to the National Institutes of Health (NIH). Slashing the NIH budget puts federal cancer research in serious jeopardy. Rare cancers such as Sarcoma, which make up a little more than 1 percent of all adult cancers, already face challenges receiving its fair share of research dollars. Serious cuts to the NIH budget will only make it that more difficult for Sarcoma research to get the attention it deserves.

The Sarcoma Foundation of Americas asks for your support -- and your voice -- for those who are already suffering from a cancer with no cure and few treatment options. We strongly urge you to contact your Representative and insist that they oppose the drastic funding cuts to the NIH budget.

Thank you for your support!

Sincerely,
